Missouri Forest Products Association Swears in New Logger Director

Shannon Jarvis, owner of Jarvis Timber Company, LLC, was recently sworn in as the “Logger Director” to the board of Missouri Forest Products Association (MFPA).

Shannon Jarvis is a 5th generation logger living in Mineral Point, MO. He started Jarvis Timber Company, LLC in 1995. “We are excited to have the experience and knowledge that Shannon will bring to our board,” said MFPA Executive Director Brian Brookshire. Shannon won the 2004 Missouri State Logging Competition and he and his crew have participated in the Professional Timber Harvester Education Program put on by Missouri Forest Products Association and the Department of Conservation. “Shannon is very conscious of practicing sustainable forestry while logging, so we are fortunate to have his representation on our board,” Brookshire added.

Missouri Forest Products Association is a statewide association providing a collective voice for Missouri’s forest products industry. Missouri’s 14 million acres of forested land supports a timber-based economy of 4.5 billion dollars. MFPA is committed to education, conservation, the wise use of natural resources, and promoting closer working relationships among the forest products industry.
